Introduction:

Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) is a concept well known in the corporate world and beyond that. All over the world CSR activities have practiced only profit making actions at past but not for long. Through CSR enterprises are intent to strike a balance between economic and social goals, where resources are used in a rational manner and social needs are be addressed responsibly. CSR can be viewed as a comprehensive set of policies, practices, and programs that are integrated into business operations, supply chains, and decision making processes throughout the company and include responsibilities for current and past actions as well as adequate attention to future impacts.

Social Islami Bank Limited (SIBL) is a banking company registered under the companies Act 1994 with its head office 15 Dilkusha C/A, Dhaka-1000. The bank operates as a scheduled bank under a banking license issued by the Bangladesh Bank. The Bank started its operation from 22, November 1995. As an Islamic Bank, Social Islami Bank Limited is quite conscious of its social responsibilities and is trying to participate in social cause related program in the country. The bank has already formed CSR Desk with the aim to serve humanity through different philanthropic activities giving emphasis on health and Education. The bank believes that any kinds of social & philanthropic activities would improve the quality of the lives of the poor masses of the country. In this paper, a comparative view of corporate social responsibilities (CSR) of SIBL is presented and also defines the concept of corporate social responsibilities and now-a-days how important it is in the banking sector of Bangladesh. Along with the analysis of the corporate social activities of SIBL, this paper also has focused on the expenses that the bank bears and the benefits get because of these corporate social activities.

Background of the Study:

Business is an inseparable and embedded part of the society. Besides conducting business activities and pursuing economic gains, business houses also have several other roles and responsibilities towards society such as the social and environmental responsibilities and business contributions that would benefit the society at large. In the modern era commercial banks are not only engaging in profit making but also paying attention to their social responsibilities. This particular paper is prepared with a view to providing an overall overview of CSR activities of commercial banks and its practicing areas. Besides it will help us along with any reader of this particular framework to learn about corporate social responsibilities, its regulatory framework and lastly advantages and utilities in a brief manner at least.

Scope of the Study:

In Bangladesh, CSR activities are not very popular yet. Under the policies of Bangladesh Bank some financial institutions have started thinking about CSR and they have also been implying those policies in different sectors. But these are not sufficient in relation to the world perspective. This paper has mainly focused on one specific financial institution named Social Islamic Bank Ltd (SIBL) (Savar Branch, Dhaka) to make an example for other financial institutions in our country which do not do any kind of research or follow any guidelines related to CSR activities for their institutions.

We have chosen Bangladesh as our sample because Bangladesh is a Least Developed Country (LDC) and in our country our investment is huge just to fulfill the basic needs. So our government has very few scopes to invest on the social developments. In that case, this is very important that the private sectors like, Pharmaceuticals, private firms and different financial institutions to auspicate the social responsibilities which are necessary for a country like us. This article can give an idea for those financial institutions which have resources for taking initiatives toward society beyond maintaining central Bank’s order. It has been observed that SIBL (Social Islamic Bank Ltd.) is just complying Bangladesh Bank’s regulations of CSR activities in limited way but further CSR activities are needed.

Objectives of the Study:

The objective of the study may be viewed as:

General Objective: To analyze the Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) Exercises of a Financial Institution in Bangladesh: A Study on Social Islami Bank Ltd. (SIBL) (Savar Branch, Dhaka).

Specific Objective: The specific objectives are:

- To gather broader knowledge about CSR activities of SIBL.
- To identify the major areas and strategies followed by SIBL while performing its CSR activities.
- To evaluate the CSR contribution in proportion of profit of SIBL.

Methodology of the Study:

The survey is conducted based on exploratory research to get insight and understanding about the CSR practices of SIBL. The nature of the study is qualitative. Both primary and secondary data have been collected for this study. In-depth interviews with 20 employees of the bank are conducted. The sample size was 20 among which 18 respondents were employees, 02 were beneficiary of SIBL. In-depth interviews have been conducted by structured questionnaire with five points Likert Scale. Secondary data are collected from different annual reports, CSR journals and different websites regarding CSR practices of banks. Social Islami Bank Limited is dedicated itself towards the welfare of the society. Sample selection has been made as per non-probability convenience sampling process. Microsoft Excel and Microsoft Word software package have been used for primary data and secondary data research has been conducted to identify the variables. Reliability and validity of the outcomes of a study is depends on the reliable data and information.

Literature Review:

According to Carroll and Buchholtz (2003), the pyramid of responsibilities should be seen as a whole and the different parts should not be separated. To be profitable as a company, minimize cost and maximize sales or make sensible strategic decisions are at the base of economic responsibilities. Economic performance is required by the society. The second layer is the legal responsibilities and it is also required by society. In these responsibilities companies are expected to obey the law, because the law mirrors show the society regards as accepted or unaccepted. The difference of the ethical responsibilities from the first two responsibilities is that the ethical responsibilities are not required but expected by society. To assert ethical leadership, avoid questionable practices or operate above the minimum standard of the law could be examples for the ethical responsibilities. The philanthropic responsibilities stand at the top of the pyramid and to be a good corporate citizen and improve the quality of life for the society is the aim of these responsibilities. Corporate contributions, to support the community by providing programs or engagement in volunteerism can be example for the philanthropic responsibilities. To some extent the philanthropic responsibilities are desired and expected by the society.

According to Samina (2012) banks all over the world, in developed as well as in developing countries, are adopting various social activities for social sustainable developments. Consequently, CSR disclosure studies have been carried out both in developed and developing countries, however according to Ahmad et al. (2003), studies in developing countries are limited. This section reviews the prior studies of CSR disclosures by commercial banks in various countries focus but not limited to developing countries.

Dusuki & Dar (2005) found that the areas and dimensions of CSR as proposed by many Western theoreticians and international bodies may well be applied to Islamic banking since most of them were consistent with the spirit and the teachings of Islam. Al Omar and Abdel-Haq (1996) indicated the duty of Islamic banks towards the society in which they operated by providing a clear expression outlined in the public statement of the International Association of Islamic Banks. Farook (2007) recognized the dimensions of Islamic social responsibilities for Islamic Financial Institutions. Hasan (2005) and Tag el-Aalam S.M.S, et. al. (2010) in a paper entitled “Corporate Social Responsibility of Multi National Corporations in Bangladesh: A Case study on Grameenphone” pointed out that CSR is still an evolving concept that enables corporate executives to create and apply self determined policies to best meet the needs and demands of its stakeholders.

In Bangladesh Alam (2000) undertakes a case study on interest- free financial institutions in Bangladesh known as Islamic Bank Bangladesh Limited. Sarker (1999) in his study analyzes the performance, problems and prospects of Islamic Banking in Bangladesh. Islam, Hossain and Haque (2005) found that a significant statistical difference in sales revenue and in employee size between companies having environmental disclosure and companies not having environmental disclosure prevails in Bangladesh through using Wilcoxon rank sum test and Mann-Whitney U Test. Wise & Mahboob Ali (2009) determines the nature and extent of CSR papering in the conventional banking sector in Bangladesh and to assess the need to improve CSR by such firms. Wise & Mahboob Ali (2010) further extends their work by concentrating to the nature and extent of corporate social responsibility disclosure in the banking sector in Bangladesh. But up to now no research has been done on the CSR activities of Islamic banks in Bangladesh. So this paper focuses light to the concept of CSR from the perspective of Islamic Shariah and the practice of CSR specifically by the Islamic banks in Bangladesh. Basically this paper tries to see the extent to which Islamic banks in Bangladesh are engaged to CSR activities. In this case we follow the guidelines set by Farook (2007) regarding the CSR of Islamic banks according to Islamic Shariah.

Duarte and Rahman (2010) this paper has papered the findings of an exploratory study which examined perceptions in relation to CSR by a heterogeneous group of Bangladeshi managers from Dhaka. They found some of the responses also showed a common misconception that the notions of CSR and philanthropy are equal with each other. Only a few respondents acknowledging environmental concerns as a dimension of the CSR concept and a significant number expressed approval of CSR strategies, emphasizing that they would like to see CSR implemented in their own company.

Belal (2001) suggests that. As noted earlier, corporate papering in general and CSR in particular is greatly influenced by social, political, cultural, legal, economic and technological factors, so this paper measures the extent and volume of disclosures of CSR practices in Bangladesh by using content analysis, and explores the socio-political and economic context in which these disclosures take place. CSR practices in Bangladesh have been examined in this article under three disclosure categories as employee disclosures, ethical disclosures, and other disclosures.

Metwally (1992), Aggarwal & Youssef (2000), Maali et al (2003) found that Islamic banks are not completely fulfilling their role in accordance with the prescription of Islam. The same sort of result was found by Usmani (2002). He found that very few Islamic banks and financial institutions have paid attention to the social aspects. He further highlight that in a number of Islamic banks, other permitted forms of financing are not affected according to the procedures required by the Shariah. Now it is the time to evaluate the scenario incontext of Islamic Banks of Bangladesh.

Azim et al. (2011) in a study named “Corporate Social Disclosure in Bangladesh: A Study of the Financial Sector”, Corporate social responsibility is not the only ethical dilemma that financial institutions face in an atmosphere of corrupt corporate practice. The literature recognizes that CSR practices differ from country to country (Adams, Hill & Roberts, 1998b) and between developed and developing countries (Imam, 2000). Furthermore the nature and patterns of CSR vary between types of industry (Gray, Javad, Power & Sinclair, 5 2001). Surveys of CSR practices in western countries reveal that companies place the greatest emphasis on disclosing human resource information such as employee numbers and remuneration, equal opportunities, employee share ownership, disability policies, and employee training (Gray et al., 2001).

Corporate Social Responsibilities exercised by SIBL:

CSR means the corporate social responsibility which means encompassing the economic, legal, ethical and discretionary expectations that society has of organizations at a given point in time. In a simple way it can be said that CSR is a business’s concern for the welfare of the society. It is based upon some basic principles as integrity, fairness and respect. For SIBL, a business is always based upon goodwill and trust of the customers and stakeholders. SIBL always mention themselves as the trusted partner of the customers.
